I'm very sad to hear of Josh's passing. I used to play Xbox with him quite a bit a while back, and felt that we became friends after a while. I unfortunately never had the chance to meet up and hang out in real life, but he will still be missed. Thoughts are with his wife, daughter and family.

You were the most easy going friend I have ever known. I never saw you without a smile on your face. Well there was one time when Steven painted your car for NOPI and there were drip marks down the side of the door, lol but after a few that smile was right back on it. You will always be missed but never forgotten! My prayers, thoughts and love go to your beautiful little angel and amazing wife.

Josh, it's been a long time since we've actually spoken. Thanks to the powers of Facebook, we were able to reconnect. I was shocked to find out you were sick. Life is so much bigger than anyone realizes. You never know what it will bring from day to day. Your wife is an amazing woman, and even though I have yet to meet her in person, she has my utmost respect!!!! You have a beautiful little princess! The pictures of you two together are truly heartwarming! I have this vision, the moment you closed your eyes on Earth, you opened them standing in front of Heaven's gates. St. Peter opens the gates, and you find Jesus standing there with arms wide open! You have been fully restored, youthful, and vibrant. No pain, no sickness, no suffering! Jesus wraps his arms around you, and says "Welcome HOME!" You look down on us crying, and mourning your passing. You give a smile and say to Jesus "If they only knew where I'm at right now!" I'll see you again one day, fly with the angels my friend!
