I still can't believe I'm writing this but I met Sue when she was 9yrs old I believe & Ive been with her brother ever since. Through the years as adults , having children , and living in different states we weren't able to visit or sadly keep in touch as much as we should have but that never changed the love that was always there. I have so many memories of her when she was young , watching her grow up practically we shared a lot of laughs & great talks ,& some tears along the way , that was always the same through the years when we did see or talk to each other . I would always bring up in conversation about her moving out by us but although it never happened I didn't need to be with her everyday to know what a loving , genuine person she was , it shows in her children & the love they have for her and all the peoples lives she's touched , I will never forget or stop loving you Sue and I know your Brother feels the same. Oh how I wish we'd of made that vacation to Cali come true !! 😭 that we talked about in our last conversations I was so looking Frwd to it . ♥

My mom was my best friend in this world. She will forever be in my heart. I will always be so thankful for the memories we have made, for the memories she created with her grandkids, for the life lessons she has taught myself and my siblings. She always babied us kids, she always took care of everything and took care of everyone else. We never had to be tough and stand on our own, but she's toughening us up now, even in her passing she is still teaching us. She was the most selfless person I've truly ever known, the most kind, most genuine. She was so much more than my Mom though, She was a mom to my siblings, to my husband and to so so many more, everyone called her mom, she never turned anyone away, she was the best Nana a mom could ask to have for her grandkids, she was an amazing wife, and she was the baby sister. She will be remembered by so many. I love you Mom.
